Karen Bandy Design Jeweler

25 NW Minnesota Ave., Ste. 5

www.karenbandy.com, 541-388-0155

Tucked between Thump coffee and Alleda Real Estate, Karen Bandy is Central Oregon's only national/international award-winning jewelry designer, specializing in custom design in downtown Bend since 1987. Her designs are bold, fun and always very wearable. They fit the Central Oregon lifestyle, are made for each individual personally and are always one-of-a-kind.

Bandy is also an abstract painter who is working on a new series called The Continuum. It speaks to life slowly evolving through time, nature, birth and death, but also how we try to box it up in a neat little package, containing it, veiling truths and forgetting the lessons of the wise ones before us. The subject matter and the physical process of working with paints speaks to this idea of 'the continuum' as Bandy works both transparently and opaquely, adding layers and scraping away, creating line and texture and revealing hidden messages and truths.

Open Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday 11:30-5pm, First Fridays, and by appointment at other times.

New works by Dan Chen and William Pickerd. Dan's bronze wildlife sculptures and William's alabaster vessels will be on exhibit along with a few collaborative pieces from the artists. Please join us for this special event, to visit with the artists, sip a glass of wine and enjoy Rich Hurdle and Friends trio. Thru October.

Chen's professional career focuses on nature and wildlife art in both sculpture and painting. He brought years of experience from his home in China. Moving to the Pacific Northwest, and settling in Springfield, Oregon, inspired in Dan his love of wildlife. He depicts the indigenous creatures from the region in beautiful bronzes.

Pickerd is a woodworker turned sculptor who uses the lathe to transform chunks of alabaster and wood into vessel shapes. The stone, held in a traditional lathe (a Hegner VB 36 Master Bowl turner) and worked almost exclusively with hand tools, is trimmed with exotic hardwoods on the rim and the base of each vessel.

"My compositions include elements drawn from many cultures, relying heavily on the pottery created by the early Pueblo people. As a person of Native American heritage, many of the vessels I carve are inspired by the vessels of tribal America. Some are simply playful.

William lives with his wife on a small farm in the McKenzie River Valley.

Oxford Hotel

10 NW Minnesota Ave.

541-382-8436

The Oxford Hotel celebrates First Friday with artist Megan Phallon showing acrylic on canvas, thru October 29.

Phallon notes that challenges can stimulate creativity. She speaks from experience for her art reflects a lifelong struggle with Narcolepsy.

Painting from an early age, the artist created unusual imagery influenced by dreams; the first artwork she sold was to her the sixth grade teacher - a rendering of apples picking people of all ages off trees.

Her dreams also influence the vivid abstract colors and surreal patterns of her paintings. Additionally attracted to the vibrant colors of Haitian art and the Lowbrow genre, known as pop surrealism, her acrylic art often displays surreal images such as the white, folded Origami birds of Earth Day.

Popular for her striking paintings commissioned by Visit Bend for the Tin Pan Alley Art Collection, Phallon's art also currently appears at their office in Featuring three local artists during October. Julia Kennedy started beading after she moved to Seattle in 1995 and needed a rainy day hobby. Since then, she has sold her bead-woven jewelry at dozens of juried art shows around the Northwest. She moved to Bend in 2003 and has branched out to create jewelry using leather, wire and soutache techniques. Now retired, her professional career included ten years as a journalist in New York and over twenty years as a marketing manager for high tech firms in New York and Seattle.

Linda Heisserman

Linda Heisserman works in porcelain clay because it reminds her of a canvas. Each piece is thrown on the potter's wheel. When the piece is leather hard, she starts carving with a single edge razor blade and dental tools. Linda uses a light green celadon or blue celadon for her carved pieces because the glaze pools in the deeper grooves and pulls off the higher part, which quietly accentuates the carving. Linda strives for her pieces to be both functional and special enough to bring a smile to a person's face and eyes.

Primarily known as a plein air artist, Sue Lyon-Manley's current body of work focuses on taking her plein air work to a new level in her painting career – creating impressionistic-to-abstract images based on work done on-site. Combining the emotional sensations of working in the field with in-depth studio work, Sue is able to translate those emotions into a deeper connection with the world that surrounds her.

En plein air is a French expression which means in the open air, and is particularly used to describe the act of painting outdoors. The Plein Air Painters of Oregon is a regional organization of artists who are passionate about painting on location. Members enjoy the camaraderie and security of painting with others in a group environment while endeavoring to produce the luminous quality of out-of-doors light in their art. These artists brave cold, heat, wind, mosquitoes and more to capture a fleeting moment in time. Founded in 2003, the group meets for frequent paint-outs during the warmer months of the year.

Susan Luckey Higdon is fascinated by swirling layers of water, from surface reflections, to what lives below and the stones and fallen leaves and needles along the bottom. She explores this theme in her October show of new works at during the First Friday Gallery walk. Using acrylic on cradled birch board, Susan's paintings capture the complex interactions of color and pattern in what she describes as natural abstractions. "My actual rendering style is impressionistic and representational. But I like to abstract the image using composition—by framing the scene differently so the viewer is sometimes not immediately sure what they are seeing". Susan was recently featured in H2O and Bend Magazine and is the signature artist for the Deschutes River Conservancy's annual RiverFeast event.
