Annual High Desert Museum

Art in the West

Exhibition & Auction Shares Vibrant Works Inspired by the High Desert

From canvas to photographs to sculptures, the High Desert Museum's annual Art in the West exhibition and online auction — now in its second decade — features the very best of art inspired by the High Desert.

The 2025 exhibition opened July 5 and is the largest yet, with nearly 120 pieces on display. It's also one of the rare instances where you can purchase art from the Museum's walls: the online silent auction provides a way to take home your favorites at the end of the exhibition.

"We are always in awe of the diverse array of artwork that continues to captivate visitors, and this year was no exception," said Museum Executive Director Dana Whitelaw, Ph.D. "These works unveil fresh and unique perspectives of the West, helping us better understand and appreciate the region."

Visitors will be awed by the vast array of artworks ranging from landscapes to abstracts. Two artists' works are recognized each year as part of the exhibition, one as Jury's Choice and another as Curator's Choice.

The 2025 Jury's Choice Award winner is Jake Trujillo's Painted Hills No. 1, an 18" x 24" oil over acrylic panel. Based in Santa Fe, New Mexico, Trujillo is known for his oil and acrylic landscape paintings of the Southwest. His paintings feature innovative and dynamic color, blending traditional landscape oil painting with modern design and psychedelia. A featured artist at Sun & Dust Gallery in Santa Fe, Trujillo's work seeks to emphasize the craft of the artwork as much as the color and theme. As such, each painting is hand framed. Visitors can also view Trujillo's Moab No. 3 (oil over acrylic on panel, 14" x 11") in the exhibition.

Frank Buffalo Hyde (Nez Perce, Onondaga), who participated in the 2024 Sensing Sasquatch exhibition at the Museum, is this year's Curator's Choice Award winner. Hyde's 25" x 34" acrylic on canvas Buffalo Fields Forever invokes a vibrant and unique perspective. Hyde's paintings examine and elevate an image of contemporary Indigenous life through a pop sensibility and uncompromising satirical eye. His work has been shown at museums including the Wheelright Museum of the American Indian in Santa Fe and the Gilcrease Museum in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Another work by Hyde on display is Agency #8.

Those artists are the tip of the iceberg. The 2025 exhibition boasts acclaimed painters, sculptors, photographers and more, hailing from across the country.

Visitors and art enthusiasts can look forward to seeing works by national artists such as David Sherwin Parker and local favorites like Judy Hoiness. Parker's Impressionist style in his 18" x 24" oil on canvas, A Journey Together, depicts a vibrant West. Hoiness, a fourth-generation Oregonian and a Bend resident, shares her acrylic on canvas, The Great Basin—A Moment in Time.

Another artist returns to the Museum for Art in the West. Hilary Baker's Night, a 24" x 24" acrylic on linen, was showcased in a past Museum exhibition, Neighbors: Wildlife Paintings by Hilary Baker.

The entire 2025 collection is on exhibit at the Museum and available for viewing through the Museum's online auction page at highdesertmuseum.org/aiw and the 2025 Gallery Guide available online. Online bidding is now underway, with the opportunity to purchase artwork outright. The auction is exclusively online, and shipping is available.

The bidding concludes and the exhibition closes on Saturday, September 20, at the Art in the West Closing Party at the Museum. Attendees will have the opportunity to mingle with participating artists, watch live demonstrations and enjoy food and libations. The event is from 6–8pm, with the auction closing at 7pm. Register today at highdesertmuseum.org/aiw-closing-party-2025.

Art in the West is made possible by Western Art Collector and American Art Collector magazines with support from Campfire Hotel, Central Oregon Radiology Associates and High Desert Frameworks.

Continuing through August 28 is Central Oregon Community College's (COCC) summer art exhibition at the Bend campus's Barber Library, a collection of nearly 50 landscape paintings by Oregon artist Don Olsen, titled Rain Shadows.

"I've spent my life unraveling the mysteries of the Pacific Northwest," said the artist in a statement. "With countless layers still to uncover, I draw inspiration for my art from both its natural and cultural history." Born and raised in Portland, Olsen is an art instructor at Clackamas Community College.

Continuing through September 20, the annual Art in the West juried exhibition and silent auction will be on display at the Museum, showcasing over 120 traditional and contemporary works that honor the landscapes, wildlife, people, cultures and history of the High Desert. The full collection is available on our online auction page at highdesertmuseum.org/aiv.

Continuing through September 7, Frank S. Matsura: Portraits from the Borderland, examines Indigenous representation and identity during a period of regional transformation. Frank S. Matsura: Portraits from the Borderland will feature 39 photographs recovered from Matsura's archive paired with period-specific cultural items from the Indigenous Plateau, a High Desert region that encompasses the Columbia River and its tributaries. Exploring Indigenous representation through detailed photography as well as objects, the exhibition spotlights some of Matsura's most culturally significant work against a backdrop of regional transformation in the early 20th century.

Continuing through October 5, the Museum's newest exhibit, Patterns at Play: Fractals in Nature, showcases how repetition and patterns intertwine in the natural world. The exhibit allows visitors to build their own patterns while an animation creates new fractals right before their eyes. Fractals are never-ending patterns that repeat the same shape at bigger and smaller scales. Fractals in nature appear to humans as messy, even chaotic. Trees grow by branching in every direction; seashells swirl around and around. Mathematicians, artists and naturalists have noticed these patterns for centuries.

Layor Art invites you to Sacred Veins: A Tribute to the Living Earth, a collaborative exhibition by contemporary abstract artists Lacey Champagne and Kristine Cooper. Through layered textures, raw marks and grounded palettes, the work draws from the places that move us... rivers, canyons, root systems and wild lands that run like veins through the body of the Earth.

"The nature that surrounds us here in Central Oregon is sacred," shares Kristine. "You can feel it when you step outside and smell the fragrant juniper trees, touch the ice-cold rivers with your toes, and watch the sunrise turn the sky into a vibrant masterpiece. To live in this space acts as a current of constant inspiration. This art show will leave you with a new perspective and a fresh lens in which to see the world."

This exhibition is both an offering and a reminder... to protect what is sacred, to stay connected to the land and to honor the spaces that shape us.

Join us for First Friday, August 1 from 5-8pm for an evening of art and connection.

Peterson Contemporary Art opens Less is More August 1st from 5-8pm. This show features three incredibly talented painters. Although their styles are vastly different, each one finds the essence of their subject in a unique way. Wendy Chidester honors objects lost to time with a painterly approach that gives her chosen artifacts a photorealistic effect. Her still lifes have the dignity of a formal portrait, transforming each item into an icon of its time. Jerri Lisk and Vallerie Winterholler both find inspiration in nature, expressing their experiences with singular techniques. Lisk's process transforms raw sketches from nature into meticulous paintings infused with light and depth. Winterholler distills her experiences outdoors into abstracted landscapes that capture her fleeting impressions and memories. The artists will be in attendance for the opening to enjoy the evening and engage with viewers to discuss their work. The show will run through the end of August.

See the beauty of Oregon's varied landscapes through the eyes of Pamela Beaverson and Jan Dow. Jan will be presenting her pastels, and Pamela her oil paintings. Both artists chase the colors of the landscape in and out of shadow and reflection. Sometimes dramatic, sometimes subtle, the colors of Oregon's high mountains and high desert shine through their work.

Chasing Shadows and Reflections will be up through the month of August. The show can be viewed during regular business hours, Monday-Friday 8:30am-5pm. Stop by during the First Friday Art Walk on August 1 from 5-7pm to meet the artists.

The Stacks Art Studios & Gallery features the artwork and work of local creators Kira Frances, Lindsay Gilmore, Alyson Brown and Jennifer McCaffrey.

Kira has developed a body of work that speaks to the relationship between the hidden worlds of the subconscious and the tangible reality that we all share. In this series, she concentrates on striking a balance between precisely rendered and intricately detailed feathers, and uncluttered backgrounds. Her work will be on display at The Stacks Gallery and Studios in the Old Mill above Sisters Coffee. You can also find her work online at kirafrances.com.

Lindsay Gilmore creates abstract landscape paintings inspired by the colors and compositions that have captivated her while on adventures outdoors with her family.

Alyson Brown (Wild Folklore) is a photographer and stylist specializing in beverage and botanicals. While she focuses most of her time on brand development and content creation, Alyson is also The Stacks in-house mixologist for First Fridays.

Jennifer McCaffrey says, "As a former dancer, capturing movement is the overarching theme in my work. I love painting in a variety of styles ranging from abstract to impressionistic, and my aim in any piece is to create something that feels alive. I first studied art at Wake Forest University in 2009, and went on to work in healthcare while painting in every spare moment I could find. It is a dream realized to be a part of this community of creators. Apart from painting, I work PRN as a surgical physician assistant, am a mother of three, runner, woodworker, music lover, and trail mix high-grader. Like most Bendites, I am usually out somewhere with poor cell reception taking in the beauty of Central Oregon when not in the studio."

Sarah B. Hansen opens her August exhibit, Untamed Bloom, at Tumalo Art Co. August 1, from 3-7pm during the Old Mill District First Friday Gallery Walk.

Untamed Bloom is a series that celebrates the wild, resilient energy of nature and the human spirit. Inspired by wildflowers that thrive in unexpected places, these paintings explore emotional depth through color, movement and the use of negative space. Each piece reflects a different state of being — vibrant, unraveled, quiet or bold. This series is a tribute to resilience, to beauty that refuses to be contained, and to the emotional wilderness we all carry within. Most of the mixed media paintings in this exhibit are large format presenting a strong visual experience.

Tumalo Art Co. is an artist run gallery in the heart of the Old Mill District, open seven days a week.

The Wine Shop presents the mosaic art of Jessica Carleton. Jessica's body of work is a tapestry of abstracts, landscapes, whimsical pieces, representational works and art that spans various sizes and settings, from indoor to garden, and from 2D to 3D.

Driven by insatiable curiosity from an early age, Jessica was inspired to pursue a diverse artistic journey. Throughout her life, she has delved into a wide variety of mediums — from quilting and ceramics to welding and mosaic art. Despite pressures to maintain a consistent style, she embraces constant experimentation and innovation. Dedicated to inspiring others, she champions the accessibility of mosaic art and helps people discover their creative potential.

Dry Canyon Arts Association will hold a reception for the August Artist of the Month, Dominique Ovalle-Kongsli. Dominique describes her watercolor paintings as "quirky, fun and lighthearted." Among the recurring motifs in her watercolors are anthropomorphized trees where the natural markings become eyes. Her travels in Thailand inspired these playful, yet profound forms. Given the demands of being a wife, mother, teacher, writer and mentor, Dominique's personal mantra is, "My direction is more important than my speed. It consists of letting myself be cared for by my Creator. My direction is belief—that a painting will work out—and that my life will work out, too. It's not about speed or quantity. It's about intention. I want each piece of art I make, whether it is large or small, to be loaded with joy, emotion and beauty."

July Artist of the Month, Valerie Smith will show her works in a variety of media: graphite, pen and ink, pastel, colored pencil and acrylic. The media itself brings joy in the process of creativity. From her reference photos, she builds every line, muscle and shadow into place.

Cascade Hasson Sotheby's will also be hosting Dry Canyon Artists;

Cheryl Graham is an acrylic artist who captures the essence of her subjects through color and brush strokes.

Bob Newhart

A Silent Brush in Search of Sound

by NOAH NELSON — A&E Feature Writer

Bob Newhart is an abstract artist based here in Bend, who was selected as the Artist in Residence for the Bend Visitor Center for the month of July. His visual work as a painter is heavily influenced by his love of music; jazz and classical musicians like Miles Davis, John Coltrane, Thelonious Monk, Bach and more inspire his every brushstroke, transforming music from an auditory experience to a visual one.

Newhart was raised across the country, primarily in California and Hawaii, however he switched schools often. The seventh and eighth grades came with 14 school changes, which he says directly impacted the way he interacts with the world. His only education in the art world would be a fourth-grade art class he took in Hawaii, where he put on a one-boy art show in his school's library.

Selling his first painting in the tenth grade, Newhart saw a life of creativity in front of him. His education took him all over, from studying Zen and the Mahayana Tradition of Buddhism to architecture at Cal Poly, and finishing graduate school with the University of Cincinnati.

His diverse experience and educational background eventually led him to founding the Innovation Center, where he was able to help individuals and organizations on their journeys to success, through creativity, and of course, innovation. He developed a process that he dubbed "intentional innovation," which centers on finding and celebrating the networks and patterns between creativity, music, art and innovation.

His work with the Innovation Center led him all over, from being an on-screen host in films and TV shows to appearing on radio shows, publishing articles and being an internationally sought-after public speaker.

These days, Newhart spends more time in the studio than the office. "Much of my art is about an eternal quest to embrace uncertainty and put it to music," he said. "It's about leaving expectations and judgements behind because they infect us with impatience, disappointment, anger and rigidity. Sometimes we think that expectations allow us some degree of control, when in reality, those expectations control us."

Freeing himself from that control, Newhart goes into his artwork in ways that many classically and professionally trained painters would not; with no plans, simply letting the music guide his hand.

As a result, his work evokes a raw emotion. His art is layered in experiences and tells an evolving story through abstract strokes. He says that when an artist leaves things like expectations and control in the past, "they can move on to experience the natural combustion that comes from the mix of wonder, spontaneity, imagination, creativity, serendipity and fun."

Newhart's work was on display at the Bend Visitor Center for the month of July, but that wasn't his only big contribution to Bend's art scene that month. Newhart helped coordinate a new idea aimed at making Downtown Bend's First Friday Art Walk more family friendly, or at least, less overtly focused on complimentary beer and wine.

The Art Detective's Club was a one-time (and hopefully, soon to be regular) event during First Friday that encouraged guests to frequent different Downtown businesses to acquire a stamp or passport sticker, marking their participation and helping each business draw in customers for reasons outside of free alcohol.

Newhart says that the event was a popular success, with multiple businesses asking for a repeat event, and many people participating; Newhart even says that the number of adults who participated was surprising, but absolutely encouraging.

While the Newharts (Bob and his wife Wyndee) may not be up for running the Art Detective's Club, they encourage the organizers of the Art Walk to consider the concept, and potentially make it a regular addition.

Sisters Artist Don Zylus

Earns High Praise for Moody, Masterful Watercolors

Fall Monarchs by Don Zylus

One of the greatest compliments an artist can receive is a commendation from a knowledgeable person who has no idea they are being overheard. Although Don Zylus has received many accolades and honors over the years, one of the most recent informal “honors” came from a Christies Art Auction house representative who happened to see his work at Toriizaka Art in Sisters. The representative said that Don Zylus’s work is simply exceptional, especially the soft washes he uses to create transparent watercolors, and that his strong color choices produce incredibly moody scenes. She concluded by saying that works like his would be priced at least three times more if they were in New York.

Born in 1934, Don Zylus lives an active and creative life in Sisters. He is an avid fly fisherman and hiker, drawing daily inspiration from the natural beauty of Central Oregon. Zylus moved to the region in 1970 and began working in Bend as a commercial artist. Over time, the area’s breathtaking landscapes and rich biodiversity proved irresistible. Gradually, he shifted his focus to the delicate wildlife and floral subjects that have since become his signature.

Largely self-taught, Zylus has developed a distinctive watercolor technique, using amorphous wet-wash methods that have earned him recognition and praise from both collectors and fellow artists. His work is celebrated for its ability to convey mystical, enchanting moods — an effect rarely achieved with such fluid and unpredictable materials.

Don Zylus’ work has received national attention and critical acclaim. Two of his paintings are part of the permanent collection at Roberts Field Airport in Bend-Redmond, where he has also regularly participated in juried exhibitions.

His art has been featured five times in Gray’s Sporting Journal, and in a significant honor, GSJ Press included a full-color Zylus painting in its collector’s edition, The Art of Shooting Flying — an exclusive volume highlighting only fifty of the nation’s premier wildlife artists.

Zylus has earned top honors in numerous juried shows, including Best in Show — Watercolor at the 2005 Spokane Western Art Association Show and Best Watercolor at the annual Thanksgiving Art Show at the High Desert Museum in Bend.

In 1983, he was selected to exhibit in the Cincinnati Zoo’s Wondrous Wildlife exhibition and was commissioned to create the official poster for the 1999 Sunriver Music Festival. He also served as the commissioned artist for the CAL-OR Stream Enhancement Organization in both 2002 and 2007, and in 2006 was named Companion Artist for California Ducks Unlimited.

Zylus’ paintings pay quiet homage to the gentle horizons and tranquil beauty of Central Oregon. Through his masterful use of natural color and exquisite detail, he invites viewers to pause, reflect and reconnect with the outdoors. His work captures a sense of freshness and immediacy — one collector described it as “a glorious vision that has touched my heart.”

Don Zylus is an artist with a gentle heart and a boundless imagination. His deep reverence for nature shines through in every ray of sunlight, every mountain, flower, leaf and creature he paints. Each piece is not just a study of the natural world, but a celebration of its spirit — an invitation to see with wonder and feel with sincerity.

Don’s works can be found at Toriizaka Art and Sisters Gallery and Frame in Sisters and in Leaberg at Ken Scott’s River Run Gallery.

Sunriver Art Fair

Features Oregon Painter

A painting by Central Oregon artist Dave Fox, The Destination, has been selected to feature as the Sunriver Art Fair's 2025 commemorative poster.

The poster, printed on archival paper and suitable for framing, is available for purchase at sunriverartfair.org or at the fair on August 8-10 in The Village at Sunriver. The Sunriver Art Fair will feature over 80 juried artists in a beautiful outdoor setting in the resort community of Sunriver. The artist will be available to autograph posters during the three-day event.

Dave is a self-taught narrative/landscape artist working primarily in oil paint. He draws inspiration from his surroundings, from broad landscapes to simple narrative scenes of everyday life. He tends to use subjects and scenes from the seasons in which he's painting. Summer in summer. Fall in fall. Except late winter or early spring, then he paints the season he wants to be in. Summer. Dave lives in Bend with his wife and three canine assistants, Kula, Kai and Dozer.

The Sunriver Art Fair is produced by the Sunriver Women's Club. Net proceeds support community grants to nonprofits and public schools in south Deschutes County.

NEW PERSPECTIVE FOR AUGUST

by EILEEN LOCK

Thinking about the past on the 1st could bring challenges to relationships. Feeling awkward on the 2nd could be an indicator that it's time to let go of old grudges and disappointments. Take a few days and remember what is important to you and think about what you want next. Be willing to change your approach after the 6th and you can be a positive influence. A change of plans on the 8th could invite you to slow down. The Full Moon on the 9th is a good time to simply relax and let other people take the lead. A cooperative attitude on the 10th will make everything easier.

Learn the lesson and make the change on the 11th and this could create new opportunities. A series of conversations from the 14th through the 17th will introduce new experiences. Keep an open mind on the 19th and you might be delightfully surprised with what you learn.

The New Moon on the 22nd brings new challenges and it will be important to be patient and have faith in the outcome. Pay attention on the 24th while things are changing quickly. Put yourself first on the 25th and you will realize what a difference this makes. Ask for help on the 26th and appreciate those who show up for you. Changes on the 28th could feel like a wish come true. Talk openly on the 31st and share your joy with those around you.

Of Oil & Water

The Art & Journey of Dominique Ovalle-Kongsli

by DINA RHODEN

Dominique grew up in the Bay Area where her earliest memories are of a house filled with music — two pianos being played on separate sides of the house. “My entire family is musical, and I remember painting to music as soon as I could hold a paintbrush.” Later, her older sister, discovering that 13-year-old Dominique had pierced her belly button, wasted no time telling their parents. Her punishment: being grounded for three months. “I couldn’t call my friends or go out on the weekends. It was a very isolating time, so I found some oil paints around the house and just painted. In high school I saw an image in National Geographic and wondered if I could translate it with paint onto the canvas. I loved the challenge of translating something I saw into something I made.”

That challenge inspired Dominique to pursue degrees in art, graduating from Pepperdine University and Claremont Graduate University. She credits titans like Mary Cassatt, Richard Schmid and Claude Monet for their impact on her approach to composition and light. Oil painting holds an undeniable allure for her. “Oil paintings are sexy,” Dominique says. “The paint glistens sensuously atop the canvas, luxurious and velvety. It’s my favorite medium. However, the stakes are high — there’s the cost of materials, but also my energy must be extremely focused so I can capture the radiant wing of a butterfly or the spray of silver in the waves. I think to myself, ‘I better make this good.’ I would say my creative superpower is having ideas, so many inspirations and so many things I want to paint.”

Now in her 30s, with two young children ages three and five, Dominique has entered what she calls “a unique and sacred season.” Extended hours in front of a canvas are now hard to come by. “Motherhood has taught me to adapt, to savor small moments and to find meaning in the margins. It’s changed my art, but it’s also made it more meaningful.” For the moment she’s put oils aside for watercolors. “Oils demand steadfast commitment, but watercolors have excellent ‘interruptability.’ I can put them aside to make lunch or play with my children without worrying about losing the flow of the work.”

Dominique describes her watercolor paintings as “quirky, fun and lighthearted.” Among the recurring motifs in her watercolors are anthropomorphized trees where the natural markings become eyes. Her travels in Thailand inspired these playful, yet profound forms. Given the demands of being a wife, mother, teacher, writer and mentor, Dominique’s personal mantra is, “My direction is more important than my speed. It consists of letting myself be cared for by my Creator. My direction is belief — that a painting will work out — and that my life will work out, too. It’s not about speed or quantity. It’s about intention. I want each piece of art I make, whether it is large or small, to be loaded with joy, emotion and beauty.”

Dominique has collaborated with Bend photographers to capture realistic landscapes, amping up colors and using the tiniest four-hair brush to create trees. From giant murals of butterflies to small canvases capturing flowers or faces, Dominique celebrates life around her.

For her, there’s a distinct difference in the process of realistic versus abstract painting. “In the landscapes or portraits, there’s a finite ending. These pieces can be completed in steps and stages that I’m in control of. With abstract pieces, there’s always the risk that I’ll never feel finished with it because I think it needs more tweaking. My drive to create abstract art is because I don’t know what it will look like in the end.”

For emerging artists, Dominique has this advice, “Stay open to inspiration. Respond with whatever energy you have, be it little or much. Every brushstroke carries intention, and every medium tells its own tale.” See Dominique share her art and process on YouTube, painting with her baby son strapped to her back.

Meet Dominique at a reception in her honor at Cascade Hasson Sotheby’s International Realtors in Downtown Redmond during First Friday Art Walk, August 1 between 5-8pm. Dominique’s art will be installed at Sotheby’s for the reception and will stay on display during the month of August. Hors d’oeuvres and beverages will be served.

Watercolor in BLACK & WHITE

by ELIZABETH HABERMAN

Watercolors by Elizabeth Haberman

The term 'watercolor painting' indicates that one might expect to see a bit of color in the painting! And most of my paintings over the past 16 years have been quite colorful; but when I was perusing a series of my photographs of local and somewhat colorful wildlife, I thought, "why not paint them monochromatically?" The first experimental attempt was a painting of a clustered trio of birds titled, Three's Company. I found that I enjoyed the challenge of expressing the details of the animals in "black and white," and onward I went.

Following retirement and a move from Los Angeles to Central Oregon, the first painting instruction I received was from renowned Sunriver and Tumalo Art Gallery watercolorist, Helen Brown. She frowned on anyone who used black paint from a tube and insisted that I create my own black paint by combining two colors typically found on a painter's palette. The black paint recipe I painted with that first year of watercolor is the same one I use today, a combination of ultramarine blue and burnt sienna, leaving some grays a bit bluer and others more taupe depending on the amount of each of the two ingredients. I enjoyed the (almost) colorless experiment so much that I painted the series of five paintings shown here.

I have studied with aforementioned Helen Brown, Judith Morris, Myrna Wacknov and David Lobenberg. I'm currently director of the Nancy McGrath Green Gallery in Sunriver.

I think of painting as therapy: a quiet place I can go by myself to express something I'm feeling or to describe a scene from the space around me. My subjects are serious and whimsical, colorful and dark, and sometimes even "black and white."

Elizabeth (Liz) Haberman is member of the High Desert Art League and the Watercolor Society of Oregon where she won Best of Show in 2020 and an Award of Distinction in 2022 and 2023.

The Van Cliburn International Piano Competition is widely considered “one of the most prestigious contests in classical music” (The New York Times, June 2022). From its origins in 1962 through today, it has remained dedicated to sharing music with the largest international audience possible and to launching the careers of its winners. Sunriver Music Festival has the honor of presenting Cliburn medalists every few years and this 48th season August 2-13 welcomes the brand new silver-medalist Vitaly Starikov.

“For me, true art is possible only when it is created with conscience and authenticity,” said Starikov. “I am inspired by those who remain true to themselves, whether through their actions, teaching or performances.”

Born into a family of musicians, Starikov’s journey started when his parents enrolled him to sing in a children’s music group at age three, and he went on to Ural Musical School for Gifted Children in his native Yekaterinburg at seven. He made his concerto debut at age ten with the Ural State Russian Folk Orchestra, and his recital debut three years later. It was at 14 that he committed his life to music. He received bachelor’s and master’s degrees at the famed Moscow Tchaikovsky Conservatory and is now at the Yale School of Music, pursuing an artist diploma.

Recital and chamber music appearances have taken him around the world, notably to Austria, Australia, Slovakia, Israel, Cyprus, Italy, France, Belgium and Malaysia, with highlights including Sydney Opera House, Queen Elisabeth Hall and the Great Hall of the Moscow Conservatory. He has performed with the Antwerp and Belgian National Orchestras, Sydney Symphony Orchestra, Belarusian State Symphony Orchestra and St. Petersburg Symphony, and toured with the Orchestre national de Metz Grand Est.

Starikov’s appearance in Sunriver on August 12 and 13 is the culmination of Sunriver Music Festival’s August 2-13 concert series, with concerts in Bend and Sunriver. Details and tickets can be found on SRMF’s website.

Eighteen Years of High Desert Chamber Music 2025-26 Season Announced

High Desert Chamber Music (HDCM) invites you to join us for our most ambitious season yet! The 2025-26 season features an all-new roster of performers making their Central Oregon debuts in the HDCM Concert Series. With ensembles hailing from Jordan, France, the Czech Republic and New York, this international lineup promises a thrilling year of world-class performances right here in Bend. Tickets are available now!

HDCM continues to present the highest level of excellence in all our offerings. "Bringing these internationally acclaimed artists to Bend has truly put our organization on the map," says Isabelle Senger, HDCM Founder and executive director. "We're proud that High Desert Chamber Music is now an essential stop for classical musicians touring the Pacific Northwest."

The season opens with a performance by award-winning pianist Karim Said, praised by Intermezzo for his "clear and robust articulation with an intelligence of phrasing way beyond his years," and described by Classical Iconoclast as "impressive technically... effortless elegance and grace." This gifted Middle Eastern pianist makes his long-awaited Central Oregon debut.

Next is Quatuor Agate, an exceptional French string quartet and recipient of the Young Classical Artists Trust Award and the European ECHO Rising Stars Award. Fresh off a tour of 23 major halls across 14 countries, this acclaimed ensemble brings their dynamic artistry to our stage for the first time.

Our beloved Valentine's Day concert returns to the Tower Theatre with a special performance by the Tesla Quartet. Celebrated for their "superb capacity to find the inner heart of everything they play" (International Review of Music), the group will perform a romantic program perfect for the occasion. As always, the evening includes a rose for concertgoers and a sweet treat from Goody's Chocolates.

The season continues with Trio Bohémo, an electrifying piano trio from the Czech Republic. Since their 2019 debut, they have earned top prizes at international competitions and drawn rave reviews, including Wigmore Hall's statement: "They are the music that this world needs."

The HDCM Celebrity Recitals return this season, presented by Pahlisch Homes, and will feature legendary cellist Peter Wiley and Steinway Artist Anna Polonsky. Frequent recital partners, their performances have been described as "rich in tone, technical mastery, and true artistry" (Chamber Music Society of Utica).

The HDCM Concert Series concludes with the Tekalli Duo, a dynamic sibling violin and piano ensemble. Known for their technical brilliance and deep musical connection, they captivate audiences with every performance. The Examiner raves, "The Tekalli Duo are bonded by a sizzling musical connection, capable of holding their spectators spellbound."

In addition to the HDCM Concert Series is the Annual Gala, a festive evening that includes a performance, dinner, silent auction and dessert dash. Genevieve Reaume from Central Oregon Daily returns as emcee for the event, which will be held on Friday, December 5, 2025, at 5:30pm at the Unitarian Universalist Fellowship.

Artists participating in this season's Music & Friends fundraisers include Karim Said, Trio Bohémo, the Tekalli Duo and Peter Wiley. These performances are held at private residences featuring a special program of music. Please contact HDCM for more information or to request an invitation.

HDCM's educational outreach is generously sponsored by Brooks Resources Corporation. This season, the Tesla Quartet and Quatuor Agate will visit and perform at local schools. In addition, Peter Wiley will present a Cello Master Class in Spring 2026. All educational events are presented in partnership with the Cascade School of Music.

As we approach our milestone 20th season, HDCM is more energized than ever. With a thrilling slate of new artists, expanded outreach and growing community support, the 2025-26 season is one you won't want to miss. Tickets for all events are available through HDCM online, by phone or in person at their office in Downtown Bend. Season Ticket subscriptions include a discount and seating in a reserved section.

High Desert Chamber Music's mission is to bring world-class chamber music and musicians to Central Oregon. HDCM presents an acclaimed series of classical chamber music concerts featuring an exciting roster of professional performing artists. Join us in our eighteenth season and experience the impact that live musical excellence can bring to our community!

Thief

is Coming to Central Oregon August 14-24

Adapted from the first book of Rick Riordan's Percy Jackson series, The Lightning Thief, this high-energy musical is sure to electrify audiences of all ages. Join Percy Jackson on his quest to discover the truth about his origins and himself while discovering new friends and new dangers.

Percy Jackson had only known trouble, bouncing from school to school due to confusing misunderstandings and mishaps. One particularly bad day, he finally discovers the truth: the Greek gods are real, and he himself is a half-blood; a child of one of the Greek pantheon. After mythological monsters kidnap his mom and nearly kill him, Percy finds himself at Camp Half-Blood, a summer camp for half-blood demi-god kids like himself. Percy reunites with school-friend Grover, a Satyr, and makes many new friends including Annabeth and Luke at camp, and what follows next is an emotional, raucous journey full of friendships, quests, betrayals, prophecies, adventure and so much more.

Meadow Sky Productions is proudly continuing their commitment to pay their directing team, actors and backstage crew. Thank you to our local community for making this possible!

Central Oregon audiences of all ages are invited to join us at Camp Half-Blood this summer!

Totes for Art

"Frequent Flyer" Tote Bags a Win-Win for Art Education & First Friday Shoppers

Desert Canyon Arts Association (DCAA) was the beneficiary of an idea from an unlikely source recently when Jessica Klein, owner of Desert Prairie Boutique in downtown Redmond, used ChatGPT to come up with an idea to turn First Friday browsers into repeat customers. Normally, the prospect of artificial intelligence makes artists either resentful at its unlicensed use of their work or suspicious of its appearance in work supposedly made by human hands. But on this occasion, ChatGPT suggested program to bring art educators into every Redmond elementary school classroom. And as an incentive to buy the bag and to return to shop again, participating businesses are offering ten percent discounts when shoppers show their tote bags during each First Friday.

Klein is really passionate about the new program and is starting to see the results. "I have a mother and daughter who bought a bag and have come to the last two First Fridays and have made it a point that this is their shopping day together, to see the

that Desert Prairie Boutique use tote bags as a promotional tool. Klein was the human, however, who took this nugget of an idea and blended it with Jumpstart Art, a project initiated and promoted by DCAA. Since DCAA participates in First Friday Art Walk as the group who coordinates most of the artist exhibits, it seemed like a match made in heaven (or Redmond).

Klein's idea has manifested into a tote bag, available at Desert Prairie Boutique and several other downtown businesses, that proudly calls on viewers to "Shop Local" on Redmond's First Friday. Ten dollars out of each purchase of a $20 tote bag goes to support Jumpstart Art, DCAA's artists, get the discount. They're so excited about it and I love that!" she said.

Arome is one of the downtown businesses that has embraced the Jumpstart Art/First Friday tote bag. "It was all Jessica's idea from Desert Prairie Boutique. She came up with the concept and pitched it to surrounding businesses asking us if we wanted to participate and it was an absolute 'Yes!,'" said Janice Bell, owner of Arome, a cuisine and kitchen specialty shop. Bell explained that the hope for the long run is to see those return customers and the financial benefits that come with better sales. "In the short term, it's more about making friends, generating a sense of community, and having a positive atmosphere in the store which I think is really important too."

The Jumpstart Art program began in 2024 when DCAA committed their organization to raise enough funds each school year to fill a funding gap in the Redmond School District budget that left elementary schools with no money for visual art education. Through grants, fundraising and donations, DCAA provided nearly $70,000 in the 2024-2025 school year — enough to provide funding to pay for visiting art educators for every elementary school class in the Redmond School District. They plan to do the same for the 2025-2026 school year and each year that such a funding gap remains. The First Friday tote bag sales will contribute to that goal.

The following downtown Redmond businesses have pledged to sell tote bags and offer ten percent discounts to tote bag shoppers during First Fridays: Desert Prairie Boutique, Arome, High Desert Florals, Willow Wild, and Swan Song Vintage. Tote bags will not be available for purchase at Cognitive Surplus Stationery and Gifts, but they are offering a 30 percent discount on featured items to First Friday shoppers who show their tote bags at the register.

SISTERS EXHIBITS

Makin' It Local

281 W Cascade Ave.

541-904-4722 • makinlocal.com

Makin' It Local is featuring regionally acclaimed Central Oregon artist Cheryl Chapman of Silly Dog Art Glass and Central Oregon painter Jennifer O'Reilly. The exhibition and sale run through August 31. The artist showcase, Summer Splash, features newly released fine art giclée prints by Jennifer and reverse enamel painted fused glass art by Cheryl.

An Artists in Attendance reception is scheduled on the Fourth Friday Art Walk, August 22, from 4-7pm where you can meet Cheryl and Jennifer. Enjoy Makin' It Local's "special pour" of premium Oregon wine, our normal great Oregon beer, wine and hors d'oeuvres. Friends and Vine, a wine shop in Sisters, curates its selection of wines, and listen to live music featuring Stacie Lynn Johnson and Mystic. Will we have our "famous" Gingersnap cookies? You bet!

Cheryl employs traditional glass painting techniques, such as the "grisaille" technique, to create shadowing and texture. She then combines this technique with the addition of opaque high-fire glass enamels for detail and color. Cheryl begins with drawings embellished with a touch of whimsy, and then proceeds with the painting and firing process, which can involve as many as five kiln firings to produce the final piece.

Jennifer has worked as a fish and wildlife biologist in Central Oregon for over 20 years. Her deep connection to the natural world is evident in her vibrant, abstract landscapes and whimsical depictions of flora and fauna. Inspired by the Fauvist painters of early 20th-century France, Jennifer blends inks with both liquid and heavy-bodied acrylics to create free-flowing and boldly colored pieces that reflect a joyful spirit.

Hours are daily 10am-6pm, Sunday 10am-4pm.

Toriizaka Art Showcases Dynamic Works by Henriette Heiny & Don MacLane

Throughout the month of August, Toriizaka Art will be featuring works by Henriette Heiny and Don MacLane.

Henriette Heiny (Central Oregon) brings a richly layered background to her art, shaped by an illustrative academic career and a doctorate in Art History. After many years in higher education, she has spent the past decade immersed in painting. Earlier explorations in printmaking — lithography, relief and intaglio — inform her current work with acrylics and mixed media.

Henriette's art is a conversation between intuition and material. She primarily works with acrylics and fluid media, often incorporating unconventional techniques, allowing motion and gravity to direct the flow and layering with mixed textures. Each painting is a search for balance between control and release, form and dissolution.

"I am drawn to the expressive possibilities of color, the dialogue between opacity and transparency, density and flow and the organic forms that emerge in the process. While I do not set out to represent the natural world, my work often evokes landscapes, currents, eruptions or atmospheric shifts — traces of nature felt more than seen."

Don MacLane (Portland) is an extraordinary kinetic sculptor, coupling his mechanical engineering and welding skills with his keen aesthetic sense of balance and form to create pieces that oscillate and move based on human input.

Don's interactive kinetic sculptures invite viewers to explore and alter the rhythmic interplay between their moving parts. Exploration starts as the viewer pushes the piece for the first time then continues with successive pushes at different angles and speeds. Changing the length of a pendulum or the curvature of a rocker will alter their natural frequency and change the piece's pattern of motion.

As with all sculpture, one can view it from different positions. With these pieces the viewer can also touch and set them in motion with a gentle push. Experimentation is also possible — changing the initial conditions (angle and velocity) of the individual elements when they are set in motion or changing the adjustment of a weight's position will lead to different patterns of motion.

Don has been making objects since childhood. He built toys in his basement woodshop and then, as a teenager, built a small sailboat. In high school, he took an evening class with Roger Bolomey who traveled each week from New York City to teach sculpture.

At Antioch College, Don spent two terms working for a cabinetmaker making custom hardwood furniture. He studied sculpture with John Ritterscamp who had been an assistant to George Rickey. John introduced him to welding. Don then spent three terms as a resident sculptor at the Boston Institute of Contemporary Art's Act Workshop working alongside sculptors John Weidman, David Philips and Mac Beal. After returning to finish up at Antioch, he made his first kinetic pieces.

On graduating, he continued making kinetic work and studied sculpture with Paul Buckner at the University of Oregon. His welding skills steadily improved and led to summer employment first making steel buildings then heavy equipment.

After completing an MFA at Oregon, he returned to Boston to work with his friends from the Act Workshop. He had a small studio shop in New Hampshire and spent summers helping a friend move and reconstruct old timber frame barns.

After four years on the east coast, Don moved back to Oregon and worked as a welder before enrolling in the mechanical engineering program at Portland State University. He alternated between periods of full-time study with periods of full-time welding. He finally received a BSME and went to work developing color printers for Tektronix then Xerox.

As a student then engineer, Don had little time for sculpture but started to play the hammered dulcimer. He began to study the science of musical instruments, finding that their vibrations were remarkably close to the oscillations of his kinetic sculptures. He started making instruments — the first being a hammered dulcimer. He played

by Henriette Heiny

it almost daily however it was not very portable. When a work assignment sent him to Japan for weeks at a time, he needed an instrument that he could take with him. An idea to make a hammered dulcimer like instrument with clamped cantilever bars like a thumb piano led to the development of his hammered Mbira instruments.

He must have made a dozen different versions of the hammered Mbira before early retirement from Xerox allowed him time to make both sculpture and instruments full time. His many years as a welder, engineering student and engineer provided much of the skills and knowledge he employed in making his instruments and kinetic sculptures. Over time, Don built up a well-equipped studio / machine shop. Retiring from Xerox in 2006, he picked up making kinetic sculpture right where he left off years earlier.

Betty Gray Gallery

Features Two New Shows

by Jim Fister

La Fille au Bord by Wade Womack

As summer truly comes upon Sunriver, we all enjoy seeing visitors and homeowners alike revel in the beauty of Sunriver. To join the fun on the bicycle paths, the Betty Gray Gallery of Art at the Sunriver Lodge features two new shows. Husband and wife Wade Womack and Alisa Looney are showing in the upper gallery, with photographer Holly Fischer showing the lower gallery.

Womack was born and raised in Idaho, studied design and printmaking at Boise State University and abroad at the Faculté du Lettre in Avignon France. He works primarily with the reduction wood block printing technique. Wade feels art is a tool of expression. "I want the art to be unified in expressing an idea, a story. The line work, color, subject matter, all exist to express the idea. I want to affect the viewer in every way possible." Wade also applies his knowledge of craft to pieces he calls "Total Art," which engages multiple senses: visual, auditory, experiential and time based, to bring a deeper appreciation of our environment and that which surrounds us Best known for her award-winning outdoor sculptures, Alisa has exhibited in the U.S. and Canada. Alisa owned a graphic design and illustration business in Portland, and began welding in 1998. In 2010 she returned to Idaho to study enameling with John Killmaster, which allows her to merge metal sculpture and narrative imagery into her most complex work to date. Nature and its unseen connections inform her work. Sketching on hikes, bikes, paddles and skis in Central Oregon throughout the seasons, her work is intended to inspire connection and care of our planet and each other.

Holly grew up in South Texas, and developed a love of the natural world from an early age. She spent hours riding her horse exploring the terrain. After moving to California and starting a family, Holly picked up a camera to take family photos, and never looked back. Holly enjoys living in Central Oregon, surrounded by the terrain that inspires her latest work.

Art is like Music to Your Eyes!

by DENI PORTER

August in Sunriver is closely connected to both music and art. The combination of good weather, Sunriver Music Festival and the Sunriver Art Fair is a powerful mix! Not to be outdone, the Artists' Gallery of Sunriver features four of the best artists in the Gallery. Although the gallery is open every day from 10am to 7pm for your enjoyment, it is also fun to stop by for our Second Saturday Celebration on Saturday, August 9 at 4-7pm. You will be greeted by happy artists ready to share appetizers and liquid refreshments.

Featured this month is wood block printing artist Wade Womack. Womack works primarily with the reduction wood block printing technique as his tool of art expression. Relief printing (wood block) is the oldest method of print making. In its essence, the artist carves away anything that he does not want in the final piece. The remaining wood surfaces are inked and then placed ink side down and a wooden spoon is used to rub the image to a piece of paper. The process becomes more complicated when multiple ink colors are introduced. Womack will be happy to explain the process and supply examples when you visit on Second Saturday. It is amazing that something that sounds so simple can produce works of art that are so beautiful.

Glass artist Robin McQuiston admits to having a long-term love affair with her medium. Back in the 1980s when she was introduced to Dale Chihuly's pieces with their intensity of color, movement and design, she was hooked. In 2018, McQuiston narrowed her focus from blown glass to fused. She uses a variety of fused techniques that feature the clean lines and patterns that she most enjoys. In her art pieces, the viewer will find micro patterns from the natural world such as DNA or repetitive shapes found in river and rocks.

Painter Sylvia Avenius-Ford has been a big favorite at the Gallery for many years. Her paintings range from small to large and from colorful to more colorful. She incorporates intense kinesthetic qualities by not only using texture and bright colors, but sometimes throws on a bit of gravel, pottery shards or rope. Avenius-Ford grew up in Africa and South America and her paintings reflect those wonderful cultural influences. She likes to hear about how happy her paintings make viewers. Each painting tells a story.

Stained glass artist Becky Henson loves the entire process of making stained glass art pieces. (Even the smell.) You can see her love in every piece — large or small. One of Henson's most popular pieces came from inspiration here in Central Oregon. She can't seem to find an end to the beautiful art glass combinations that are utilized in her Three Sisters circle pattern. The artist also enjoys creating windows with secondhand items such as bevels from old lamps or window frames, giving the glass pieces a wonderful new interpretation.

Open daily at 10am, the Artists' Gallery is in Building 19 in the Sunriver Village next door to the Mexican cuisine restaurant.
